SR, the county's boomtown

Sprawling San Ramon spreads east here from I-680. At lower right is new Crow Canyon development, winding around a golf course.

Although the general population growth rate in Contra Costa County is slowing down, the San Ramon Valley remains a rapidly growing area.

According to the Oct. 24, 1977 Contra Costa County profile, the San Ramon Valley has been "the most rapidly growing area of the county in the 1970s."

Availability of land, housing, transportation, open space and education have been contributing factors in shifting the population focus to San Ramon Valley.

Recent population projections suggest that rapid population growth is a phenomenon of the past for Contra Costa County in general.

Relatively low birth rates and a moderate level of migration into the county in general are expected to result in modest growth, according to the county profile.

Growth is expected to increase slightly above the low rates experienced during the 1970-1977 period to a rate of approximately 1½ per cent per year.

Projected population levels for 1980, 1985 and 1990 are estimated at 627,200, 674,000 and 718,300 respectively.

During the high growth periods, the county's age distribution did not follow the usual pattern of a rapidly growing and urbanizing area in which the age of the population drops markedly.

Instead, the median population age remained relatively constant at around 27 to 28 years in the period 1940-1970.

Although the median age in 1970 was only 27.8 years during 1960-70, the percentage of persons aged 65 and over increased from 5.5 per cent to 7.0 per cent. The percentage of persons less than 20 years of age declined from 42.3 per cent to 39.4.

Both the 1975 census and population projections for 1980 suggest this aging

Deputy due in court for arson case

LIVERMORE — A 10-year veteran of the Alameda County Sheriff's Department is scheduled for arraignment in Livermore Municipal Court today on charges he set fire to five structures near Livermore beginning late Saturday that caused more than $100,000 damage.

James William Patterson, 38, of Livermore, also is accused by police of ramming a police car with his vehicle and a misdemeanor charge of drunk driving.

Patterson has been held in Livermore city jail since his arrest early Sunday.

Police received reports that the truck scales on Interstate 580 near Greenville Road were on fire at 11:16 p.m. Saturday. Units from the fire department responded to fight that blaze.

At 1:20 a.m. Sunday, reports of two abandoned houses on fire at 915 North Vasco Road again sent the fire department scrambling. Five minutes later, the truck scales located on the eastbound lanes of I-580 caught fire.

Only fifteen minutes later, Sierra Products Inc., a plastics manufacturing plant at 1113 North Greenville Road was reported on fire in a blaze that was to cause an estimated $100,000 damage.

Officer Charles Bell was dispatched to the plastics plant with a description of a white pick-up truck as a possible suspect vehicle, and spotted a truck matching that description on Greenville Road.

Bell followed the truck to Old Altamont Road where it stopped, then turned and drove straight towards his patrol car. Thinking he was about to be struck, Bell shined a spotlight into the driver's eyes and swerved right to avoid a collision.

The truck then began backing towards the patrol car apparently trying to hit it. Bell took evasive action and levelled a shotgun at the truck when a cover unit arrived and blocked the truck's path. The suspect then exited his vehicle.

Police removed a .45-caliber pistol from the suspect's waistband and took a .25-caliber pistol from his coat pocket. A 12-gauge shotgun, .30-caliber carbine and 9mm pistol were found in the suspect's vehicle. All the weapons were loaded, police said.

Patterson had cut his hand and required several stitches. When asked how he cut his hand, Patterson reportedly replied, "I cut it at the fire."

Several auto flares were found at the scene of each fire, police reported. Officials believe the fires were caused by arson.

Patterson was charged with five counts of arson, felonious assault on a police officer, and misdemeanor drunk driving.

Saxby didn't kidnap young Justin Bezis

HAYWARD — After three hours, six men and eight women jurors in the trial of accused kidnaper James Saxby of Livermore returned a not-guilty verdict yesterday.

"I don't feel any animosity, I'm just glad it's over," said Saxby, the Veteran's Hospital nurse, who was accused of abducting two-year-old Justin Bezis March 7.

Final arguments in the case were heard in the morning when Deputy District Attorney Jeffrey Horner summarized his presentation by declaring, "Saxby needs help," a tactic vigorously protested by Public Defender Anne Harris.

Horner emphasized the legal concept of "wrongful intent and wrongful purpose" in his statement, continually hammering at Saxby's story of finding what he thought was an "abandoned" child.

Saxby contended when arrested, and throughout the trial he found the toddler walking along in a field off Wente Street, shortly after 3 p.m. that day.

He said he brought the youth to the Saxby residence and left him with his wife for eight hours because the child was dirty and thirsty and "I didn't want him turned in like this."

Horner had characterized as "deliberate tunnel vision" Saxby's claim he never saw anyone searching for the Bezis boy until he ran into a massive search party at 11 p.m. while returning from work at the VA Hospital.

Muni park lot to get two hour limit

LIVERMORE — Amid protests and a request from the county for delay, the city council moved ahead with a proposed two hour parking limit in the merchants' parking lot Monday night.

The council approved the parking for a 90 day trial period with the stipulation that a staff report on utilization and enforcement problems as well as business comments be submitted in 90 days. They also agreed for accomodations to the county for jurors who use the parking lot.

While the merchants' parking committee strongly favored the time limit, John Regan vehemently declared he would be forced to fence in his segment of the parking lot if the time limit were implemented. He said such a move would block the loading zone and rear entrances of several businesses.

"I think there has to be a better way than imposing a two hour limit," said Regan, "and I think the county feels the same way, although I can't speak for them."

He added, "I just don't understand why all of a sudden everybody wants to stir everything up."

Mel Luna, representing the merchants, said his was one of the businesses affected by Regan's threat. "The biggest problem with the downtown parking lot is why buy a lot if we can't use it?"

The merchants contend that a few businesses monopolize the parking spaces, yet all are paying for it. They are pushing the two hour limit as part of a package plan to sell the downtown business area on an expanded parking lot facility.

Rift in Pleasanton school

A conflict has arisen at Pleasanton's Walnut Grove School over the PALs Open Education Program.

Some parents and teachers say the program is being threatened by the principal, and one teacher has resigned, although he hasn't indicated whether the decision was based on the recent problems.

One meeting has been called to help remedy the situation, but did not assuage feelings at Walnut Grove.

Chowchilla trial delayed

A key defense witness in the Chowchilla kidnap-injury trial couldn't attend Monday's court session in Oakland, delaying the case until Wednesday.

An Army doctor, referred to by defense attorneys only as Col. Herman, couldn't get released in time by his employer, the U.S. Army, to attend yesterday's session.

He is expected to testify about heat illness, which, according to the prosecution, some of the Chowchilla busnap victims suffered in a van buried beneath a Livermore rock quarry in July of 1976.

BART has problems

California's Public Utilities Commission says it could take five years for BART to solve its safety problems.

In a new report, the PUC says BART has failed to respond effectively to hazardous situations and neglected to deal with safety in a comprehensive manner.

GE looks at layoffs today

PLEASANTON — In a top-level meeting this morning in San Jose, General Electric officials are considering whether to lay-off some employees at the Vallecitos Nuclear Center outside Pleasanton.

"We are currently evaluating whether some lay-off notices should be issued," G.E. spokesman Randy Watkins told The Times yesterday, adding that G.E. probably won't make a final decision regarding how many employees should go, if any, until later this week.

The center's large nuclear reactor (called GETR) was shut down late October by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission after the discovery of alleged earthquake faults within 200 feet of that reactor.

Previously G.E. supplied almost 50 percent of radioisotopes used in treating cancer nationwide from that one reactor. A smaller reactor is still in production, but most G.E. employees at Vallecitos had been working on the GETR until it was ordered shut down.

G.E. officials still contend evidence of a fault could have been formed by a landslide. But in Washington Friday, GE did suggest making safety changes in the reactor costing millions of dollars if that would persuade NRC to allow the reactor to resume production. NRC made no decision on any GE suggestion then.

Killer blaze and fireman's inspection plea

PLEASANTON — A row of apartments extending back from 537 Main Street was the target of complaints several years ago, but the apartments considered fire hazards were above the storefront and didn't include the one which caught fire Friday, killing two persons.

George H. Pierce, 59, and Barbara Jeanne Van Buskirk, 57, died in the early morning blaze at 537 D Main St.

Fire Marshall Ted Klink says he inspected the old apartments almost three years ago. As a result, the apartments located above The Castle, a bar and card room, were renovated and brought up to building code.

Apartment D, which burned Friday, was up to building code, as far as Klink knows. The fire is believed to have been caused by a lit cigarette igniting the couch.

Cranston aide hears pipeline complaint

PLEASANTON — Jerry Yoakum, aide to California U.S. Senator Alan Cranston, last night promised CARD Committee members he would take their concerns back to his boss, but would not guarantee Cranston will get involved in the pipeline and sewage problems of the Valley.

"I've got to find out what can be done from our levels. There are federal dollars involved here, but we have to assume elected officials are doing what the people want them to do," Yoakum told CARD members.

Yoakum came to town in response to a letter CARD member John Fraga wrote Cranston, urging him to take a position on the LAVWMA pipeline, which CARD has been trying to stop for the past year.

Members told the aide they want Cranston to request an independent study of the Valley sewer problems and the LAVWMA pipeline in particular.

CARD member and Zone 7 Director Robert Pearson said that only an independent study completed by federal request would convince him the LAVWMA pipeline is the best, most cost - effective means through which to meet regional water quality control board sewage effluent standards.

Yoakum said his office will "certainly look into what is being done with federal funds" (state and federal money would fund 87.5 per cent of the $40 million proposed pipeline).

He told the group his office could investigate the environmental impact statement done by the Environmental Protection Agency on the pipeline if Cranston felt the EIS was inadequate. However, he made no prmomises.

After listening to CARD members for over an hour, he ended by telling them that he would get back to them with any decision of Cranston as soon as possible.

Key busnap witness delayed by Army

OAKLAND (AP) — A military doctor who is the key defense witness in the Chowchilla kidnapping trial failed to obtain Army clearance in time to testify as scheduled Monday, an attorney said.

The absence of the witness, identified only as "Col. Herman," caused an unexpected delay as the trial neared its conclusion.

Superior Court Judge Leo Deegan, calling the development "an unfortunate circumstance," rescheduled the court session for Wednesday.

"Our medical witness has to get clearance from the military to testify," said defense attorney Herbert Yanowitz, who declined to give the witness' full name.

He is expected to testify on the subject of heat illness, which the prosecution has defined as the injury inflicted upon 27 kidnap victims.

The defense has said the medical witness will provide the bulk of its case. Unless the defendants testify, no other witnesses are scheduled.

After Monday's brief session, one defense attorney said outside court that his client may take the witness stand in his own defense.

Lester Gendron, representing James Schoenfeld, 26, said, "I have not ruled out the possibility that my client may testify."

But two other defendants — Fred Woods, 26, and Richard Schoenfeld, 23 — have decided not to take the stand, their attorneys said.

"Mr. Woods will not testify," Yanowitz said outside court. "The sole issue here is bodily harm, and the prosecution has the burden to prove such harm occurred. We do not have the burden to prove anything."

Attorney Edward Merrill said that "as the case stands now," Richard Schoenfeld would not take the stand either.

Speculation has continued that James Schoenfeld would be a witness because he reportedly designed the ventilation system installed by the kidnappers in an underground van.

The three men have pleaded guilty to the bizarre July 1976 kidnapping of 26 Chowchilla school children and their bus driver. But they say they are innocent of the more serious charge of kidnapping with bodily harm.

Their attorneys have emphasized the efforts which were made to keep the victims comfortable, including the installations of fans in the buried vehicle.

Prosecution witnesses have said that the victims suffered heat exhaustion which they defined as a serious injury.

If convicted of the more serious charge, the three would receive mandatory life imprisonment with no chance of parole. If sentenced only on simple kidnapping, they face life terms with parole possible in seven years.

Attorneys told the judge during a meeting in chambers that they expect closing arguments in the case to begin by Friday.

Some relief, but drought still severe

MENLO PARK (AP) — California's heavy rains last month brought "some relief" from the drought, but the water shortage is still severe, a federal agency said Monday.

The November storms produced the heaviest rainfall in three years, the Department of Interior's Geological Survey said in a report.

The agency added that "contents of major reservoirs increased somewhat, but still stand at only 34 percent of normal.

"Marin County, which had been hardest hit by the drought ... reported that the contents of its reservoirs increased from 18 to 24 percent of capacity."

The Kings River, which was used as a measure of southern Sierra Nevada conditions, was flowing last week at 48 percent of normal. The North Fork of the American River, used to measure northern Sierra Nevada conditions, was flowing at 41 percent of normal.

The Smith River in the coastal range of Northern California, where there have been the heaviest rains, was flowing at 259 percent of normal.

Inspect older apartments

Nonetheless Klink feels old apartments are more likely to catch fire, thus should be inspected more thoroughly.

"I'd like to see myself, a building inspector, and someone from the planning and health department take inventory of rental units, just to investigate if the apartments are dangerous or not," he says.

Klink believes a building inspector might not notice a fire hazard and vice versa.

"It would be a team concept. We could pool our efforts and look at the overall apartment instead of specific aspects."

The city occasionally makes joint inspections, according to the fire marshall, but always as a result of complaints.

"That's reacting, but we should try to instigate more inspections particularly of small, older rental units which are often forgotten."

And he adds, "After we did this a few times, we'd kind of get a feeling for each other's job and begin noticing hazards outside our field. Then if one was out on an inspection alone, maybe the person would notice hazards outside his field and turn it in to the right department."

Klink says his idea of joint inspections for older apartments near downtown has been brewing for awhile. But he wants to wait until the new fire chief, Joe Hill, is settled in his job to suggest implementation.

He notes that none of the four deaths caused by fire in the past 14 years were due to a hazardous building.

trend will continue.

Population and demographic factors, as well as economic conditions, have had substantial impacts upon building and housing trends.

The growth in households has been so great that during the seven year period 1970-77, the numeric increase in county housing units exceeded population increase.

Growth in the number of households is a contributing factor to the current high demand for housing units. This factor has helped spur the current high level of construction activity as well as the rapid inflation in home prices.

The number of single family homes for which building permits were issued went from 3,189 to 6,432 from 1974 to 1976.

During this same period valuation per unit grew by 16 per cent. That 16 per cent reflected the rapid increase in home prices.

Home ownership costs have risen so rapidly in recent years that an increasing number of county residents are unable to purchase a home. This issue is of particular concern since many county residents are reaching the age at which they customarily purchase their first home.

Open Education rift at Walnut Grove

PLEASANTON— Parents and teachers at Walnut Grove School feel the Open Education Program at the school is being threatened, possibly as the result of actions and the previous administrative experience of their new principal.

And an "airing of feelings" meeting held Nov. 22 apparently has not resolved a budding confrontation pitting Ronald Begley, formerly an assistant principal at a year-round school in Escondido, and parents and six teachers in the Personalized Activity Learning (PALs) program.

One of the six teachers in the PALs program has already submitted his resignation effective Jan. 1, 1978. Andy Jorgensen, the teacher in question, was not available to comment on the reason for his resignation.

A teacher at Walnut Grove School prior to this year, Jorgensen's resignation reportedly was brought to the attention of parents via a note home from the school.

One unconfirmed report said Jorgensen was leaving in order to further his education.

Other teachers in the PALs or Open Education Program are Peter Arbogast, Linda West, Joanne Nix, Joyce Lanto and Chris Bourg.

Major concern aired at the meeting of the 22nd apparently was tied to whether Begley, from a traditional school background, would be supportive of the multi - educational system that has been in effect at Walnut Grove the last three years.

Sharon LaBella, who heads the Walnut Grove Parent - Faculty Association, said impetus for the meeting came from a group of parents and teachers who requested that the P-FA organize a meeting so that all could voice their "side."

As the letter appearing on today's editorial page alleges, "At the center of the confrontation is the new principal hired to replace the 'supportive' principal, who recently accepted a similar position in another school district (Turlock). The new principal (Begley), coming to Pleasanton from another school district (Dos Dios School in Escondido) and having no background in team-teaching or PAL, has indicated serious doubts about the Walnut Grove format, especially the PAL program. He has made statements and taken actions which have concerned and disturbed the staff and parents of the school."

The letter writer, as well as those contacted Friday, indicate many parents and staff members went away from the meeting uncertain as to what would occur, regarding PALs and possibly the total format, in the weeks and months to come.

"The group of teachers and parents, some of whom worked very hard for the PAL program, left the meeting more convinced than ever that the PAL program was again under attack. They, the citizens, parents, and taxpayers of the community, were not going to have a voice in the type of educational programs they want and support with tax dollars. They were not going to be consulted as to the disposition of the PAL program at Walnut Grove, and for that matter, any program or decision affecting the students and staff of the school."

The writer concludes by asking rhetorically, "Is it the sole right of a school district administration to determine policy, curriculum, and format? In a nut shell, who runs our public schools?"

DSRSD interested in Murray parcel

Murray School District Business Manager Darrel Carter told trustees last night that sale of a central facilities site at or above the appraised value could result in much - needed capital improvement funds.

The 9.9 acre site is located on Dublin Boulevard adjoining the Foremost plant on the west and a sports field on the east.

Carter recommended the board request authorization from the state to sell the site, which was most recently appraised at $410,000.

The district also has an 11.8 acre site on the northeast corner of Muirwood and Forest Hill in Pleasanton, about a half - mile north of Lydiksen School.

Carter recommended the board take no action on this, the Stoneson site. It was originally intended for a school.

Carter said the Dublin San Ramon Services District had expressed interest in the central site.

Trustees also heard a time line for the Murray district receiving benefits from the state master plan for Special Education.

Wally Moreskine, director of auxiliary services, said the district must first submit a plan to the state. Under terms of AB 1250, a certain percentage of districts will be placed into the plan each year.

Murray is part of an east county consortium that includes other Valley school districts in Livermore, Pleasanton and Sunol.

Moreskine opined the district could be accepted into the Special Education Program in 1979-80.

A resolution authorizing participation in the comprehensive plan for Special Education was adopted.

Trustees saw an aerospace exhibition by Lydiksen students prior to the business meeting.

Adult signups continue

Pre-registration for winter quarter classes continues through Friday at Amador Adult Education offices in Pleasanton.

Witness says Moreno killed

HAYWARD— A key prosecution witness in the Fred Moreno murder trial testified yesterday she saw the defendant shoot Sergeant Stanley Henney at the Cal State Hayward police stiation May 30.

"Did you see that man (Moreno) shoot Sergeant Henney," asked Deputy District Attorney Michael Cardoza.

"Yes, I did," said Laura Bartoni, a dispatcher at the station at the time of the incident in which Henney, 41, and Patrolman, Gary Hart, 25, were killed.

In the morning the trial had moved to the campus security station where Bartoni later said she saw Moreno fire at Henney and then heard other shots while she hid in a backroom locker.

She claimed the incident began with a quarrel, then a pushing and shoving match between Moreno and Henney that started when Moreno complained about not receiving support when answering a burglar alarm in a campus building.

The two scuffled, knocking off Henney's glasses until Henney put a "bear hug" around Moreno's arms, she said.

Bartoni said Hart entered the scene from the back room at about the time Moreno freed himself and the two witnessed Moreno draw his revolver and aim it at Henney who responded, "Don't do it, Fred."

"I looked to see what his reaction would be and he (Moreno) shot off a round," Bartoni said. Bartoni said she ran and hid while other shots were fired and Officer Hart placed himself between her and Moreno.

In cross examination by defense attorney James Crew she acknowledged discrepancies in her previous statements about the total number of shots fired. She stated yesterday that seven were fired, including four while she hid.

In a statement shortly after the incident, and again at a preliminary hearing June 22, she remembered only four shots, a mistake she attributed to "being upset."

Emerging from the locker 20 minutes after hearing shots she said she found more police officers had arrived and saw Hart who died three hours later in a Hayward hospital.

Pleasanton workers die in crash

Two employees of Scholastic Magazine Publications in Pleasanton were killed when their car crashed and burst into flames in Castro Valley early Saturday.

Gurmit Battna, 25, of Pleasanton, and Richard Kitchen of Oakland were travelling on Redwood Road near Willow Park Golf Course when their car went off the road. The two were alone in the car, headed northbound, and apparently lost control. The car sailed down a slope and smashed a tree, shortly afterwards bursting into flames.

Report: 5 years until BART is safe

By JUSTIN ROBERTS

SAN FRANCISCO — It may be another five years before the Bay Area Rapid Transit District has solved its safety probems, according to a new California Public Utilities Commission report.

Despite several years of working on failures in the BART system, "there is still a multitude of safety projects," the report says. The problems include replacement of the system's central train-control computers, new data transmission systems, yard control facilities and even new facilities for the centralized train controls.

The report was compiled by the PUC's Rapid Transit Systems Division to assist the state Legislative Analyst's Office in assessing the role of the PUC transit unit in the future.

One major aspect of the report is the contention that future transit systems built in the state should not be allowed to start unsupervised engineering, thus avoiding problems encountered with the BART system.

The rapid transit unit was not formed until 1975, after BART had suffered two major collisions, a runaway train and a variety of other safety problems dramatically manifested after BART started limited revenue operations on Sept. 11, 1972.

The PUC's limited staff attempted to monitor BART progress, but relied on Consulting Engineers Parsons-Brinckerhoff-Tudor and Bechtel, Westinghouse Electric Co., builders of the automatic train controls, and Rohr Industries, manufacturers of BART's cars, and other contractors to assure the reliability and safety of the system, the report states.

BART's current prospects involve replacement of virtually all the critical designs and equipment, the report maintains. It also charges that "BART has failed to respond effectively to hazardous situations and neglected to deal with safety in a comprehensive manner."

The PUC also claims that if it had not been ordered by the legislature to start monitoring BART operations there would have been more serious major accidents.

The laws passed by the state after BART's failures became publicly apparent enabled the PUC to impose safety requirements upon the district — particularly after the State Senate's Public Utilities, Transit and Energy Committee ordered the Lawrence Berkeley Laboratory to aid the PUC in analysing the multitude of safety problems.

The transit district, which had been laying off engineers a couple of years ago, now has 80 engineers, plus 55 persons assigned to quality control and reliability; the PUC's rapid transit unit has seven persons, the report states.

The transit unit devotes 95 percent of its work to BART and declares that when other rapid transit systems are launched, additional PUC staffing will be needed to establish similar watch-dog units to prevent them from repeating BART's mistakes.

In Santa Clara County, where a combined light rail and bus service is presently being eyed, and in Los Angeles, where a downtown "people mover" and a heavy rail system are planned, PUC officials have already warned officials that it already has the power to require safe designs in advance of actual work. Safety requirements will be enforced before, not after construction, when system and design errors are locked in.

The PUC's position, according to the report, is that if it had had adequate staffing and the legal powers it now has, the BART fiasco may have been avoided.

The two-volume report also catalogues BART's major accidents, "near-misses" and reliability problems.

However, the report also points out that during the two years LBL and the PUC have been involved, car availability has risen from an average of 50 percent of the total cars on hand to 90 percent. In addition, the report reflects increasing reliability and a reduction of "incidents" per 1,000 car hours in service — all since BART has been under new management.

However, rail car improvements leveled out in January, 1977, and the number of computer-governed automatic train-control errors has been climbing during the "last several months."

Train-control failure rates are highest during the summer months when high temperatures disrupt the efficiency of wayside electronic components — but BART has not systematically approached this problem, the PUC charges.

Bruce Held, a researcher at the lab, uses this chamber to simulate actual fire conditions when testing firefighting respirator equipment.

Lab fireman testifies in Washington study

A Lawrence Livermore Laboratory firefighter went to Washington last week to testify at a public hearing regarding the performance of respiratory protection devices.

Larry Chandler of LLL's fire department addressed a meeting called by the National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health (NIOSH) and the Mining Enforcement and Safety Administration (MESA), the agencies that set testing standards for respirators.

Chandler's testimony is based on a study headed by LLL's Bruce Held, a respiratory specialist in the Lab's Hazards Control department.

That 18-month study showed that commercially available respirators often fail the most basic stress tests for heat and cold resistance and temperature shock.

High temperatures common to firefighting caused the faceplates in some brands of respirators to become loose, allowing air to flow in. Straps on other models melted and broke. Cold temperatures caused the air bottles to leak and faceplates to crack.

The Lab's respiratory protection experts have suggested tougher federal standards for respiratory equipment based on the study.

Social coalition to meet

The steering committee for a Valley social services coalition will meet Wednesday at 10 a.m. at the Presbyterian Church in Pleasanton, First and Neal Streets.

At a meeting last month, representatives of some 45 social service agencies in the Valley decided to proceed with formation of a coalition.

Representatives of such Valley agencies wishing additional information about the steering committee and the coalition should contact Betty Stallings, executive director of the Valley Volunteer Bureau.

The bureau is now located in its new offices at 519 Kottinger in Pleasanton.

Zone 7 through with COVA

Zone 7 will quit the Congress of Valley Agencies (COVA) and loosen itself from county control, the water conservation and flood control district's Valley board of directors decided last week.

The board directed general Mun Mar to draft a memo of understanding that would outline the agreement for consideration at the Zone's Dec. 21 meeting.

Zone 7 and the county board of supervisors held a joint meeting last month at which they discussed the separation that would give Zone 7 more control over the staff.

The Zone 7 board decided the supervisors don't have major concerns about Zone 7 operations and so will go ahead with the move.

Advertising for a general manager would occur sometime after the first of the year. Staff will conduct a salary survey in the interim.

A safety inspection by the Occupational Health and Safety Administration (OSHA) prompted the Zone 7 board to recommend minor modifications of the Dpl Valle water treatment plant at an anticipated cost of $10,000.

The construction would add railing, steps and a gangplank to ensure worker safety. Construction is expected to be completed within six months.

The board will post new maps showing the potential for flooding in unincorporated areas locally soon, the district announced.

Residents of unincorporated areas have until Feb. 7, 1978 to appeal designated flood areas. The designations will have possible effects on residents' flood and homeowners insurance policies. Locations of the maps will be announced.

The Zone board declined an invitation from the Livermore - Amador Valley Water Management Agency (LAVWMA) to sit on a technical advisory committee to make recommendations on the $36 million sewage disposal pipeline project.

The Zone would have become the tenth member to the board but declined due to the limited role members felt the agency would have had. The general manager will attend those meetings, however, and report to the board on actions taken.

Down on the farm

Getting back to a Christmas tree's roots

If you are saying "Bah Humbug" to what's happened to the Christmas tree — molding it in plastic, forging it in tin and flocking it purple with pink polka dots — maybe you should visit a Christmas tree farm.

The Pick-it Christmas Tree Farm is one of many in the area which could offer families and kids the chance to avoid "just another commercial thing and to experience an old fashion Christmas," said its owner Jackie Bressler.

The sight of the lush greenery at the farm, which owners say was the first of its kind in the Bay Area, is a pleasant enough contrast from the parched hillsides and thirsty oak trees nearby.

But, this is one place you can't be a passive observer. Nope, if it's a tree you're after, you'll have to get into the act.

First, you'll need to choose a saw. Then, the family can hop aboard one of the many hay wagons pulled by fancifully painted tractors. The big favorites, according to Bressler, are the "Flower Child" and the "Green Bug."

Then hold on, and a way you go down the paths between the "forests." A large yellow plywood duck will greet you, as will Petunia the Pig and a giant gorilla with the banner "Miss Pick-it Farm" draped over her shoulder.

When the wagon comes to a halt, quickly brush the hay off yourself and take to the trees to choose the one that suits your fancy.

That may be the toughest part. Bressler said there are 31 acres of the trees to pick from.

If the groves of fresh, fragrant pine tress look a bit odd for the setting, it is because not so long ago there wasn't even one Christmas-type tree to be found there.

Jackie and her scientist husband Larry, started the enterprise 10 years ago. "We were naturalists long before it came into vogue," said Jackie, who added that because she "loathed artifical trees," they decided to plant the first Christmas tree farm in the Bay Area.

She said they chose Sunol because of its good access to the cities. She said she didn't think people should have to "drive all the way to the Santa Cruz mountains to get a fresh, beautiful tree at a reasonable cost."

At $11.92, she contended the Pick-it Farm trees are the cheapest in the area. The odd price, incidentally, was arrived at because with tax the final price comes to $12.70 and "that eliminates the lines because change is quick to make, nobody has to fish for pennies."

The trees on her farm are mostly California Pine with some Douglas Fir. Although the drought has been a factor to contend with, Bressler said the trees have been irrigated regularly and fertilizer has been added to each irrigation.

She added that if kept in a water stand, the trees will last six weeks to two months and will stay fresh enough that they will not become a fire hazard.

Bressler, who refers to herself as a naturalist, doesn't cringe at the thought of years of growth being sacrificed for six weeks at Christmas because of the way the trees are harvested.

At Pick-it Farm, the regeneration of trees is done by stump culture. Bressler explained that the trees are cut leaving the bottom row of branches with the stump and root system entact.

This keeps the tree alive and it is left alone to grow until the next year when it is checked to see which branch has gotten the most growth. All the other branches are trimmed away, and in about two years, according to Bressler, it grows into a good-sized tree.

"An old-fashioned Christmas" is what tree farm owner Jackie Bressler hopes to provide families. Bressler, at shown here with lot manager Dave Lang, started what she contends was the first Christmas tree farm in the Bay Area.

Each tree on the lot is trimmed four times each year, she said, to provide maximum thickness.

The emphasis at Pick-it Farm, said Bressler, is to "make everyone have fun and not think of buying a tree as just another thing to pay for at Christmas time."

Pick-it Farm is located on Calaveras Road, about four miles east of Highway 680 in Sunol. It is open daily from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

There are two other Christmas tree farms in the area. Also in Sunol, two miles east of Highway 680 on Calaveras Road, is the Sunol Christmas Tree Farm. It is open from 9 a.m. to 4:30 daily. Trees there cost $12.95.

In San Ramon off of Highway 680 between Alcosta Boulevard and Crow Canyon Road, The San Ramon Christmas Tree Farm is open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. on weekdays, and from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. on weekends. Trees run $14, including sales tax.

All three farms are currently open for business.

PLEASE TAILGATE, I NEED THE MONEY

People say they see more bumper stickers in California than anywhere else. Perhaps there is something about the climates, both weather type and social, that inspires drivers to converse via the chrome.

One I liked particularly was on the back of a van: "Flying Saucers are real. The Air Force Doesn't Exist." It gives the other point of view to a burning controversy.

The young couple in the car ahead of me seemed to both be driving, since they were both on the driver's side of the seat. But then I noticed the message on the back bumper: "Honey lovers stick together."

"Wrestlers squeeze harder" according to a sign on the back of a muscle-bound camper truck parked in the Safeway parking lot.

Advise abounds. "Help Stamp Out Old Age. Smoke Cigarettes." And political opinion: "Keep Grandma off the streets. Legalize Bingo." And for those who don't know their history: "Indians discovered America."

"I'm late!" was the message on the back of a fast-back that passed me at a high rate of speed.

My neighbor has the sign on the back of his pickup truck, "I'm not a cowboy. I found the hat." And he wears a cowboy hat that looks like it was run over by several trucks. So maybe it's true.

"Insanity is hereditary. You get it from your kids," was on the bumper of a very stable-looking, blue sedan. It makes one wonder. "Have You Hugged Your Kid today?" is another.

I like the fact that you can gather a wide spectrum of thought from the sticker messages. "Dirty Old Men Need Love Too," was on the same red pickup truck that had "Firemen Are Always in Heat."

Hitch-hikers are told by one bumper sticker on a station-wagon: "Jesus Will Give You A Lift, Right Into Heaven." If you're not yet ready to leave for Heaven, I wouldn't thumb a ride with those people.

On a beat-up truck was this message: "Don't laugh. Your Daughter Slept Here Last Night."

"I brake for small animals," was the animal lover's message to other motorists. "I speed up for small animals," replied a sadist on another car.

Driving advise is freely given: "Don't tailgate. I'm pedalling as fast as I can," and "If You Can Read This, You're Too Close," and "Please Tailgate, I Need The Money." And "Caution, I Stop At All Garage Sales."

On the back of a semi-truck, "Leg Inspection Next 60 Feet," and on an orange Volkswagen was: "Farming is the Country's bread and butter." A sports car sported: "Sky-divers Are Good To The Last Drop."

But the most thought provoking bumper sticker I have seen is "Legalize Freedom."

Visitors get to ride through the trees in a hay wagon, then cut their own Christmas tree with a saw. Tree farms provide holiday shoppers with acres and acres to choose from.

Chiropractic Health Hints

BY DR. RAYMOND SERAFIN, D.C.
A NATURAL HEALTH FAMILY PRACTICE

IF YOU DO NOT ENJOY GOOD HEALTH

CONSULT YOUR CHIROPRACTOR FIRST

YOUR HEALTH DEPENDS ON THE NERVOUS SYSTEM

This column has frequently referred to "normal nerve function." We will probably use the term many times in the future. Today we will answer the question; "What is normal nerve function?"

In spite of what you have read, there is not much mystery about it. The purpose of this article is to set forth briefly in clear, understandable English how your health depends on your nerves and how those nerves can be kept in normal condition.

The nervous system of the body is like an electrical system. The brain produces nerve energy, or nerve impulses, just as a dynamo creates electrical energy. The nerve impulses are carried down through the spine and over the nerves to all organs and parts of the body. So, the nerves are like a system of wires that carry electricity to the points where it is to be used. The organs of the body do their work only because the nerves bring to them nerve impulses, just as electric machinery works only when electricity is carried to it over the wires. So, the nervous system must be in normal condition if the many parts of the body are to do their normal work.

In other words, a normal body depends on normal nerve function. Disease begins where anything interferes with the normal function of the nerves.

What do Chiropractors do?

They examine the spine to determine whether any of the vertabrae are out of normal position, thereby causing pressure on nerves that lead to vital organs and other parts of the body. When they find a spinal bone out of place, they adjust it to normal position to relieve the spinal nerves from pressure which interferes with their normal work.

Now you will understand why these spine specialists have been so successful in restoring diseased bodies to normal health. It is because of their skill in locating points of pressure on nerves, and removing the pressure, so that the nerves once more can do their normal work of carrying vital impulses to the organs of the body.

Chiropractic is applicable to a wide variety of diseases that effect the body and mind.

For more information on THE NERVOUS SYSTEM call Dr. R.J. Serafin DC at 846-4732 or write 60 Mission Dr., Pleasanton.

Mary Stewart chosen Dublin chamber leader

DUBLIN — The Dublin Chamber of Commerce voted in President Mary Stewart, Vice - President Tom Driver, Secretary Dennis Kahler, Treasurer Ron Pacheco last night at its regular board meeting.

Installation will be Dec. 21 and the installing officer will be current Chamber President Todd Lee.

Last Wednesday the three nominees elected to fill directors positions on the Dublin Chamber of Commerce board were Tim Baldwin, John Guri and Frank Lehre.

There were five nominees vying for the slots being vacated by Todd Lee, Marvin Marciel and incumbent Tim Baldwin. An official installation date is to be set. The new directors will serve a three-year term.

Baldwin, an official with Dublin's Valley Bank, has been an active chamber member since 1972. Being the only incumbent, he was able to seek reelection under chamber rules since he was appointed, not elected, before.

Baldwin was appointed a chamber director in 1975. He served as chamber president in 1976.

Guri, owner of Dublin Office Supply, has been a chamber member since 1974.

He has lived in this area for 20 years. He said Dublin has been good to him and he would like to contribute something back to Dublin by becoming involved.

Lehre, owner of Dublin Travel, reported he has lived in this area for 24 years. He contended the chamber board needs representation of small businessmen as well as large corporations and banks.

Baldwin stated the fact he elected to actively run for the position for the first time should indicate his interest in the future of Dublin.

Dr. Joyce Brothers

DEAR DR. BROTHERS: We're a rather typical suburban family, except that I've been having an increasing poblem with booze the past eight months. I just can't get off it and the terrible (or maybe the good) thing is, I don't think my husband, a successful businessman, knows. If he does, he doesn't seem to care. He travels a lot and may even be playing around with other women. I don't know and I don't care. What does worry me is that I'm almost sure my teen-age children know something's wrong. I don't think I can go the AA route. I really can't buy the religious bit and I'm sorry about that. It prejudices me. I try to limit my drinking, but I think it's getting worse. — M.DeM.

DEAR M. DeM: If you're an alcoholic, and I suspect you may be, it isn't going to get better until you get some help. Most doctors agree that alcoholism is a progressive disease. This problem is destroying your happiness, affecting your children and preventing you from examining the real problems in your marriage and your relatioonship with your husband.

You need help and I strongly suggest you contact the National Council on Alcoholism. It sounds to me as if you may be using "the religious bit" as an excuse to keep you from attending meetings of Alcoholics Anonymous with an open mind. If you'd go a few times. I believe you'd find that there are others who started with the same prejudice. First of all, AA is not a religious organization. It is not allied or affiliated with any religion or creed. They may meet in churches or church-connected buildings, but that is primarily because space is available there.

The National Council of Alcoholism can confirm that there are a good many agnostics and athiests who are active AA members. Give it a try, you may like it.

DEAR DR. BROTHERS: My two children have allergy problems. I'm aware that allergies are often psychological, but their grandparents also suffered from allergies and my husband gets hay fever at a certain date regardless of his mental state. My husband has been offered another job with pay better, but we're hesitating because we'd have to move to a badly polluted town. Since my boy has asthma, I wonder if it's worth the move. Last year, he complained of not being able to do his school work or concentrate well when there was a smog alert here. Is he just complaining to get attention? — J.R.

DEAR J.R.: I think most doctors would agree that allergies are often both psychological and physiological fn origin. There's no question that certain pollens can cause irritation in some people even if they're psychologically well adjusted. Sometimes, however, allergies are almost totally psychosomatic.

I doubt that your son is "just complaining to get attention." Scientists have evidence that air pollution produces psychological as well as physical effects on most people. For instance, there is litte doubt that heavy air pollution can create feelings of depression and anxiety. It is also believed that there is a significant correlation between the level of oxidants in the atmosphere and a city's crime rate.

Some pollutants can cause dizziness and blurred vision. If your child is dizzy, if he's depressed or generally doesn't feel well, this will naturally affect his ability to concentrate and study. In your particular situation, I think it might be much wiser to try to get along on a little less money and stay where you are.

Q. "WHY DO DOGS BURY BONES?"

A. WHEN A DOG BURIES A BONE, IT IS PROBABLY OBEYING AN ANCESTRIAL HABIT OF SAFEKEEPING FOOD FROM SCAVENGERS
DICK ROGERS

12/6

When a dog buries a bone today, it is following the urging of an instinct that has been handed down for countless generations.

It goes back to the days when dogs were wild, and had to hunt for their food. What food they couldn't finish eating in a meal they often buried or cached to hide it from scavengers, thus saving the leftovers for a future meal.

Your well-fed dog may not have to worry about its next meal, yet, like its ancestors, it still obeys its ages-old habit of burying bones for safekeeping. When burying a bone, a dog digs the hole with its front feet but covers the bone with its nose.

Dogs have many of the instincts of their wild ancestors. For example, all dogs gobble their food as though they were keeping other animals from grabbing it.

They turn around several times before lying down, in much the same way wild dogs trample grass to make a comfortable bed.

Dr. Lamb

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am a 25-year-old male who has been considering a sex change for a number of years.

What I would like to know is, is it possible to take a hormone drug, pill, or whatever to rid myself of my body hair as well as make me appear a little more feminine?

I realize it must be a complicated procedure, but I'm prepared to undertake whatever measures are necessary to finally come to grips with my true feelings.

I would appreciate it if you would recommend a doctor or medical center that is involved in this area, and any information you might have in this area.

DEAR READER — It is hard for me to be objective about such a request as I am basically opposed to any procedure that mutilates the human body. I am not convinced that such procedures are the best answer for people who have problems of gender identification. I say this realizing full well that not everyone will agree with me. It is not a moral question, but a scientific one as to what the problem really is and what is the best solution. I just wish it were possible for the mind and its emotional contents to be easily reprogrammed to enable people to solve such problems.

In any case, you will have to see a psychiatrist. No reputable physician will treat you in the way you would like to be managed or consider a sex change procedure for you unless you have had a thorough psychiatric evaluation. One good reason is to find out what your real identification is, and what is the best course for you before embarking on a program that you might regret later, regardless of how convinced you may be at present that you would not regret it. The first step to a proper solution is to first identify correctly what your problem really is.

Because of the complexity of this area, I think you should try to go to a university medical center psychiatric department. That will ensure a center with a multidisciplinary approach that can be used if indicated.

If you are a candidate for a sex change operation, they will put you on female hormones. Often, after taking female hormones awhile, some centers recommend that the patient then adopt a life style of being a female to see how the patient will adapt to this. If this goes well and the individual still wants to make this change, then the next step is surgical.

The male genitalia are surgically removed, but parts are used in the reconstruction process to build female anatomy. It should be obvious to you that it is easier to surgically go from male to female anatomy. You can reverse the effects of female hormones, but reversing the surgery is another matter. Of course, females do undergo the sex change to males, but the procedure is more difficult and often less satisfactory. All of this is to say you and your doctors both want to be pretty sure about what is best for you before you get to the surgical stage.

The tracheo area (voice box) can be shaved so that the male neck is not present.

Opening lead — Q ♣

By Oswald & James Jacoby

We aren't going to get into the merits and demerits of South's failure to open with a preemptive bid of three spades or his rather optimistic jump to four spades in response to his partner's club opening.

In any event he did bid it and was fortunate enough to get a queen of clubs lead from West. He rose with dummy's ace and East dropped the king. A successful spade finesse enabled South to pick up East's king of trumps and now South was faced with a problem in the red suits. There was dummy with king-jack doubleton in each one. There was South with three hearts and two diamonds.

You readers can see that East holds the ace of diamonds and queen of hearts. If South guesses corrfectly in either suit he is home. Is South a 3-1 favorite or does he have a sure thing?

He has a sure thing assuming East is a reasonably normal bridge player. East has already shown up with king-deuce of spades and king of clubs. He also has 10 red cards. He would surely have opened the bidding with both red aces. Hence all South has to do is to lead toward both red kings. One will win his 10th trick.

The initial conference

WASHINGTON (AP) — Everyone who thinks MIRV is the host of a television variety show, raise your right hand.

Now, all of you who think ICBM is a big computer company, raise your hands.

The same for those of you who think ULMS is a city in Germany.

All of you with your hands up need a basic course in the language of SALT. Not the stuff you sprinkle on hamburgers, but the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks.

If the negotiations now underway in Geneva between the United States and the Soviet Union progress as predicted, a SALT treaty setting limits on the two superpowers' nuclear arsenals will be submitted to the Senate for ratification sometime next year.

The debate on that treaty will produce more clusters of initials than the onset of the New Deal.

Senators will hold forth at length on the issue of MIRVed ICBM's. MIRV is the weapons buff's way of referring to a multiple independently targeted re-entry vehicle. An ICBM is an intercontinental ballistic missile.

Boil that down and you end up with a great big rocket that carries a bunch of nuclear warheads that shoot off in different directions.

An ULMS is an undersea long-range missile system.

These few terms are just the beginning. Once you've mastered them, you'll be ready to learn about the MLBM, SLBM, ALCM, SNVL and SNDV.

A lot of S . . .

And then there's the story of the State Department spokesman who was briefing reporters and read a statement identifying an official as "deputy assistant secretary, DOS."

The spokesman paused and asked, "What does that mean, department of ... ?"

"State," shouted the assembled reporters.

"I've been done in again by the acronyms in this building," said an embarassed DOS spokesman.

Mr. or Ms. President

The women's movement has had its impact on the drafters of the latest version of the Humphrey-Hawkins full employment bill.

In one section, the proposed legislation authorizes the president to act "to the extent he or she deems it desirable."

Too much energy

Members of Congress struggling to come up with a compromise energy bill are often less than complimentary when speaking about Energy Secretary James Schlesinger. In general, the complaint on Capitol Hill frequently is that Schlesinger would help win passage of the president's energy package if he'd keep his mouth shut.

Sen. John Durkin, D-N.H., put it this way recently: "The president ought to give Mr. Schlesinger a Christmas present of a short leash and a muzzle."

Clean it up

During one conference committee session, Durkin complained about the section of the House bill that cited standards for states to use in setting electric utility rates.

The New Hampshire senator referred to it as a "laundry list."

Suddenly, Durkin knocked over a cup of coffee. Without pausing, he continued to denounce "this laundry list on which I just dumped coffee. Now it really needs a laundry."

Hayakawa: public behind canal treaty

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. S. I. Hayakawa of California said Monday there is more public support for the proposed Panama Canal treaty than is generally believed.

"There is much more" public support, he told newsmen in a meeting in his Senate office.

Hayakawa, a Republican, indicated he will now vote for the treaty.

His initial statement some time ago that he was leaning toward ratification brought him a wave of mail. He said that over-all his mail is running about 300-to-1 against ratification. But he said "the volume of personally composed mail is more nearly 50-50."

It was apparent, he said, that the anti-treaty mail was largely what he called "canned" mail prepared by some treaty foes for the signature of others.

In reply to a question, Hayakawa said that "the canned letters have very little effect (on me)." He said the organized anti-treaty mail does not represent convictions that have been thought through individually.

Hayakawa said that his campaign quip in 1976 that "we should hold on to the canal, we stole it fair and square," did not contradict his present stand in support of the treaty. He said he always had added that the canal issue must be weighed within the context of U. S. relations with Latin America as a whole.

Hayakawa said that the individually composed letters he has been getting on the canal issue, "are just damned good...on both sides."

Asked about a rating by the Ralph Nader group giving him only eight points out of a possible 100 on such issues as consumer protection, Hayakawa countered that he thought he is more interested in the consumer than Nader is.

Hayakawa said Nader's positions on consumer-related issues ignore inconvenience and cost factors that can burden the consumer. These are things, Hayakawa said, that he personally tries to take into consideration.

Supreme Court enters water flap

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court agreed today to settle a dispute over water rights between the federal government and California, a controversy with significant impact for 16 other western states.

The justices voted to hear arguments from California that the "arid" and "semi-arid" western states should be able to impose water-use conditions on federal reclamation projects. A federal appeals court ruled last August that states have no such authority, and it is that ruling the Supreme Court will review.

The controversy essentially deals with how much say states will have in determining how their water resources will be employed by federally built conservation projects.

Congress has authorized construction of numerous irrigation projects and other water reclamation measures in western states under the Reclamation Act of 1902. The law requires the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation to "proceed in conformity with" state laws when appropriating public water for its projects.

California argued unsuccessfully before the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals that the 75- year-old law enables the state, when appropriating public water to federal projects, to place conditions on the water's use.

"This is a case of historic significance in the field of federal and state water relations," state Attorney General Evelle Younger said in his appeal to the Supreme Court. "The (lower court's) decision, if left standing, will have an enormous impact on the western states whose waters are utilized under the act," he said.

Those states, aside from California, are Arizona, Colorado, Idaho, Kansas, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, New Mexico, North Dakota, Oregon, Oklahoma, South Dakota, Texas, Utah, Washington and Wyoming.

Federal water reclamation projects in the 17 states serve 17.6 million persons — 31 percent of the states' total population. The California case centers on one segment of the largest project ever undertaken by the bureau, a network of dams, reservoirs and waterways in California known as the Central Valley Project. When the reclamation bureau decided to build a dam on the Stanislaus River in the San Joaquin Valley, it applied to the California Water Resources Control Board for the right to appropriate public water for the project. The dam is to provide flood control, irrigation and hydroelectric power.

Under state law, the water control board issues permits for unappropriated water if such water is available and the proposed use is ruled "reasonable and beneficial."

The board issued the water appropriation permits to the federal agency but said the agency could not impound water for agricultural, municipal and industrial use until it developed a specific plan for such uses of the water.

The federal government challenged the state's authority to do so, and a federal judge nullified the state's order.

On appeal, the 9th Circuit court ruled that while the federal government must go through state channels in appropriating the water, states must grant appropriation permits if public water is available. The federal government is not bound by any state-imposed conditions, the appeals court said.

In seeking Supreme Court review, Younger said the water used by federal projects ultimately is used by farmers, industries, cities and villages — "whose activities are linked with the growth and development of the states."

"It is critically important to these states that they participate in such determinations" of how the water is used," Younger argued.

In a joint friend-of-the-court brief, officials from the 16 other western states supported California, saying they were "deeply concerned" over the lower court's decision.

"It is not suggested that conditions imposed by a state in a permit issued ... can either contradict an explicit provision or policy of federal law or render a specific project useless," the states said.

"It is argued, however, that the states must have not only the power to determine the existence of unappropriated water but also to give effect to provisions of state law ... concerning public interest," they said.

Legislators will be embarrassed

SACRAMENTO — Many state officials, including senators and assemblymen, will be embarrassed by disclosures made at impending murder trials of alleged Mexican Mafia members, an informer says.

Edward Gonzales, who says he has taken part in about 10 Mexican Mafia killings, is a key witness in the Ellen Delia murder trial here. He lives under another name in an undisclosed city, protected by federal marshals.

In an interview published today in The Sacramento Union and New West Magazine, Gonzales tells how Mrs. Delia was slain last February near a Sacramento airport, and why Robert Lewis, a friend of state Sen. Alex Garcia, D-Los Angeles, was killed in Los Angeles.

Michael Delia, 33, a founder of the Get-Going Project, a halfway house for ex-convicts in East Los Angeles, awaits trial on murder and conspiracy charges involving the death of his estranged wife and Lewis.

Cops can make you get out

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court ruled today that police officers may legally order motorists stopped for traffic violations to get out of their cars.

The court, voting 6-3, reversed a decision by the Pennsylvania Supreme Court that had said such orders routinely given by police for self-protection violate the motorists' constitutional rights. "Establishing a face-to-face confrontation diminishes the possibility, otherwise substantial, that the driver can make unobserved movements," the court's majority said in an unsigned decision. "This, in turn, reduces the likelihood that the officer will be the victim of an assault."

Ben 'Superstar' again

It's been four years since Ben Davidson has played football for the Oakland Raiders but the ex-defensive end has been keeping constantly busy.

The 6-8 Davidson, who weighed 280 pounds in his playing days with Oakland, has kept busy working with the March of Dimes and has appeared in two television series, "Ball Four", and "Code R", among many other things.

But now he's particpating in athletics again.

Ben won the Veteran's competition in the qualifying rounds in November for ABC's Superstars competition . He will compete in the finals in Febuary.

Davidson showed his versatility by winning the bicycle and row boat competition. He was third in the obstacle course (amazing for a man his size) was second in weight lifting and sixth in bowling.

Bob Beamon, world record holder in the long jump, was second.

Davidson's win in the bicycle race was not suprising as he holds the record in that event.

Was Davidson suprised that he won the competition?

"No, not really," he said as a group of ABC television crewmen were filming him at Dublin High School yesterday. "When I looked at the events and saw some of the guys who would be competing I thought I would do all right.

"We were allowed to choose seven of 10 events to compete in. Mark Spitz (former Olympic swimming champion) couldn't compete in his specialty. We weren'tallowed to compete in our best events."

The veterans competition was confined to men who had been out of sports activities for several years, according to Davidson. "Some were out of action a few years too much," he laughed.

Although most of the competitors were out of sports action for several years there was an impressive list of athletes Davidson had to beat.

Former Los Angeles Ram star Deacon Jones finished fourth. Matt Snell, Don Maynard and Seattle Supersonic basketball coach Lenny Wilkins were other famous "names" in the competition.

The finals in Febuary will be tougher for Davidson. Some of the present football, basketball and baseball stars will probably compete in it.

"A lot of guys who are competing in football now may turn out for it," Davidson commented.

Despite his layoff from football Davidson says he doesn't really miss the game.

"I've had a chance to do a lot of things since then (his retirement from football) ", he said. "I've had a chance to work with my mind a lot with the television shows and doing a lot of odd jobs."

Still, once a man has competed in athletics he can find it hard to stay away from it forever.

"It'll be nice to compete on a physical level again," he said. "It should be very interesting."

White still can't believe he's out

Mike White emphasized, "I've just gone through the most bitter disappointment of my life. I'm deeply concernd with some of the recent trends in intercollegiate athletics."

White, fired as University of California Golden Bear football coach after six years at the helm,called a press conference Monday in San Francisco to give his "side" of the story.

Athletic Director Dave Maggard told White last Wednesday his services were no longer needed at the Berkeley campus.

At the time Maggard insisted the firing was his alone and that no alumni pressure had been brought to bear in this case.

Mike, accompanied by his wife,Marilyn, assistant coach Artie Gigantino and four of his former players, compared his Cal situation to that of a couple entering marriage, citing there'salways the possibility of divorce.

He added, "I had a feeling I might be fired, but wasn't really sure.

"The toughest thing is to try to look into my wife's eyes and try to find the answer why?"

The ex-Cal mentor said, "It's hard to believe but there was no specific reason given. Contrary to what was printed thereas no warning in this matter.

"And if I knew I was to beterminated I wouldn't havebeen sitting with quarterback Gary Graumann that very day discussing his future in Cal football."

White recallpd, "Dave Maggard and I came to Cal together. Just like starting a marriage. There was a lot of chaos in the athletic department then.

"In my case I'm extrmely proud of what we've accomplished at Cal in my six years. This has beenthe greatest experience of my life. I feel we created something. We gained respect for Cal's football program, not only in the Bay Area, but nationally as well."

Said thp former Acalanes High School and Cal athlete, "I feel bad about leaving. Wewere on the verge of greatness. I would have done nothing different. I wish to repeat my integrity and loyalty are untarnished. I leave the Cal football program in good stead."

Then he declared, "I feel the University of California has done an injustice to me and my family, my eight coaches and the players I'm reponsible for. My four new assistant coaches are victims of this situation. If I had any warning this was coming I would have recruited a lot differently and would have considerd othr job opportunities."

Hp recalled, "Six years ago when I made a commitment to Cal I had two other job offers."

Mike said, "The tremendous emphasis on winning and losing is driving a lot of people out of this profession.There is a dire need for consistency in intercollegiate athletic programs."

The former mentor suggested, "This should not be a profession that hangs on outside pressures. And people should understand what is expected of them. I will do everything I can to make this a better profession."

White said, "I've received phone calls from coaches all over the country. One was from Homer Smith of Army." Smith is the former University of Pacific mentor who was told he had to win seven games this season and beat Navy. He accomplished both and is still the head football man at West Point,N.Y.

White was asked what part alumni should play in a college football program. "None," came his reply.

Cal finished the 1977 campaign with a 7-4 record. But the Bears were 3-4 in the Pac-8 and failed to beat Stanford in the "Big Game."

Mike's overall coaching mark at Cal was a 34-31-1.

White didn't know whether avictory over Stanford and a trip to the Sun Bowl would have "saved" his job.

Maggard said he made his decision to release White after evaluation of Mike's six years as coach.

White said, "I went in to talk to Dave the Monday before I was letgo. I asked him what he thought of the program because my contract had one yearto go on it."

When it became evident later in the weekthat White was to leave to the Cal scene, Mike said, "Resignation was discussed, but I'm not a resigner, not a quitter."

White indicated he had no immediate plans as to his future.

On the weekend trip to Minnesota with the San Francisco 49ers, I ran into a Green Bay football enthusiast, who said, "Boy, I hope we get Mike White to coach the University of Wisconsin. Look at all the good quarterbacks he's turned out and the other players that have gone into the pros."

Then too, White is a close friend of Dick Vermeil the former UCLA coach, who now directs the Philadelphia Eagles.

The University of Missouri also has expressed interest in White.

Four from EBAL on team

Pearson leads All - East Bay

Dublin High wide receiver Dan Pearson leads an EastBay Athletic League quartet of players named to the All - East Bay Football team selected by the East Bay Prepwriters.

Besides Pearson, who caught 39 passes during the regular season with an average yards gained per catch of over 20, San Ramon's Mike Campbell was first team on both offense and defense and Guy Houston made first - team quarterback for the EBAL champion Wolves.

Campbell, runner - up to Pearson in the EBAL receiving stats, made the defense as defensive back. It was a unanimous choice.

Monte Vista's Mike Fiorenza was named to the first team as linebacker.

The EBAL landed seven more players on the second team.

On offense, Foothill's Gam Sisneroz was named as utility man and Jeff Perry of Livermore, who kicked an EBAL record 48 -yard field goal this season, made it as placekicker. Daryl Hansen, who led a Livermore offensive line which led the league in rushing, made the second team defensive guard. Mike Cockerton of Monte Vista got the pick at center.

On defense, Granada's Mike Nalty was a choice at defensive line while another Matador, Kevin Gosney, got the nod at linebcker. Nalty was passed up in all-EBAL selections.

Steve Robison rounded out the locals on second team defense with a defensive back selection.

Six EBAL plyers were named honorbale mentions. They included: Rowdy Corrick (placekicker, San Ramon), Greg Tennyson (tackle, Livermore), Jerome King (tackle, Dublin), Monte Winn (defensive back, Foothill), Ron Rodrigues, (linebacker, Livermore), and Glen Hill (linebacker, Amador Valley).

Top teams in Classic

If the second East Bay Prep Writers' prep basketball poll is any indication,the Amador Basketball Classic which starts tomorrow should be a treat for fans who like top-grade basketball.

Second-ranked Castlemont and fifth-ranked Bishop O'Dowd are in the tournament as well as local favorities Amador Valley (rated 12th) and Foothill, (2-0 and ranked in the honorable mention list.

McClymonds, which was rated second last week, moved to the top spot after first ranked Oakland was topped by St. Elizabeth. Castlemont lost to Berkeley but toppled El Cerrito.

O'Dowd, featuring 6-7 Guy Williams, is 5-1 on the year and co-favored for the Catholic League crown with third-ranked St. Joseph. The Pilots jumped a notch in the standings from fourth place despite losing a one-point decision to Riordan of San Francisco Friday night.

California, which looked impressive in winning the Riverbank tournament championship last weekend, and Livermore, are also in the honorable mention list.

Sacred Heart, another Amador Classic team, fell to Terra Linda of Marin County, 59-56, Friday night in the City. The Irish are now 1-2 on the season.

The tournament's first round action tomorrow has Bishop O'Dowd facing Washington (last years' North Coast Section 3-A runner-up) at 7 p.m. and Amador tackling powerful Castlemont at 8:30.

Thursday night's action has Stagg and Arroyo playing at 7 p.m. and Foothill meeting Sacred Heart at 8:30.

Fighting, biting Warriors host Houston

OAKLAND — The Golden State Warriors were angry enough to mix into three seperate fights of varying significance Saturday night and, after the game, coach Al Attles was angry enough to point some barbs at his own team, which meets Houston tonight at the Coliseum at 7:30 p.m.

"I'm not the happiest guy in theworld," said Attles when told he looked glum despite a 118-101 win over the Atlanta Hawks. Lack of response from Warrior substitutes, and not the scuffles involving Rick Barry, Robert Parish and Clifford Ray, put the frown on Attles face.

"If we're expected to win, we can't get a 20-point lead (79-59 midway through the third period) and have them cut it to nine," Attles said. "Some people have to get their heads of of the sand and think what they're doing here.

"Every one can't play 40 minutes, but you've got to go hard when you're out there," he explained, adding, "I'm upset for the guys who build up the 20-point lead and watch us lose it when they come out.

"Next time, they might not put out quite as much."

Saturday, Hawk coach Hubie Brown was put out of the game at half time after the only brawl of any real substance. Pieced together from what could be seen 50 feet away and conversations with Parish and Ron Behagen of the Hawks, here's what happened:

Behagen grabbed what he thought would be a half-ending rebound, Parish crashed into him, they fell to the floor, Behagen still in possession and Parish punched at Behagen. The battle was broken up before any harm could be done, but Behagen was called for the foul, sending Brown into a frenzy that led to his dismissal.

"I'm quite upset," said the agitated Brown afterward. "Not because we had to play Golden State without our three best scorers (Steve Hawes and John Drew had sprained ankles and Charles Criss collapsed from nervous shock after his father's funeral in New York). I'm upset about losing our fourth best scorer on a play under the basket where there's not foul."

That particular collision, which put Eddie Johnson out of the game, occured late in period one and led to a brief scuffle involving Barry and Brown. Brown called Barry "an immature child" and claimed that Barry missed with a punch, "as usual."

But the Hawk coach's rage was mostly for the Parish-Behagen embroglio.

"Al (Attles) has Ron Behagen, so I go over to see if he's all right and I find out their calling the foul on him," said Brown. At this point, the clock read 0:00, so, says Brown, "I asked (referee) Ed Rush to check the clock — if the clock had run out, how the hell could he foul?"

He asked too often and too loudly. Rush tossed Brown out and the Atlanta coach is now a candidate for a $250 fine.

"I find that to be the biggest mockery of all," Brown continued. "Just because Eddie Rush lost total control, I shouldn't be thrown out of the game and our team shouldn't be penalized four points."

Barry made both free throws off Brown's technicals and Parish made two-of-three in a penalty situation after the call on Behagen.

Behagen was inYolvedj along with Dave Winfield — the San Diego Padre outfielder, in the stomping of future Cleveland Cavalier center Luke Witte in the infamous -Ohio State basketball game a few years back, but says he has no pro history of violence.

"This is the first fight I've EVER had in the league and it's the first technical I've had in three years," Behagen said. A quick check of the Philadelphia press guide, the bible of NBA trivia, confirms his statements.

Dons fail in bid for title

BERKELEY — Undefeated Hartwick College scored two second - half goals and goalie Aly Anderson shut down explosive San Francisco to give the Warriors a 2-1 victory Sunday in the NCAA soccer championship.

Steve Long and Art Napolitano scored goals and Anderson chalked up nine saves in pressure situations before allowing the Dons their only goal on a head shot by Anthony Gray with two minutes remaining.

The victory squashed USF's bid for an unprecedented third straight national title and stopped the 25-4-1 Dons' winning streak at 20 straight games.

Hartwick, 16-0-2, scored first with 2:40 elapsed in the second half when Napolitano took a kick from puncan Mcponald and headed it into the goal.

Long scored unassisted with 19 minutes elapsed taking the ball in front from the left side after defender Jan Skaug fell down and goalie Peter Arnautoff failed in a diving bid to block the ball.

Both sides missed several opportunities in the scoreless second half and the Dons missed a ;ast - ditch effort in the final minute of the game when a shot by John Brooks tipped the top of the goal.

Glad wrestlers keep it in the family

Several things happened to the Chabot College wrestling team last Saturday night. Overall, the Gladiators walked away from the Skyline College Invitational Tournament with their third consecutive victory Chabot tallied 85 total team points to the nearest challenger for the crown, Cypress College, with 67. Eighteen junior colleges from throughout Northern California were represented.

Veteran sophmore Bill Choate had a first for the season as he completely blitzed three opponents in the 177 pound division. Although he lost in the finals by a close 3-2 decision to Christian of Ohlones College, it really wasn't so bad according to him.

For one thing, the Irvington High grad explained that his match partner was a good friend from high school, and that thing do get tougher as the day progresses.

"The body moves easier, but the opponents don't get that way," he said during the dinner break.

The emphasis for Choate this season will be working on his feet more, and not to slack off or get overconfident.

"I go all out and do the best I can. Win or lose I can't be mad at myself if I wrestle the best I can," he stated.

Choate, a Fremont resident, is pleased with the Chabot program.

"I've seen what it's like if we all go all out. We're really close. This team unity; it seems that Chabot has it every year," he reflected. "And the coach is a coach 365 days a year," he added.

"There's a lot of togetherness on the squad. The sophmores help out backing up the freshman," he said.

The victory last weekend was costly for the Glads though. Sophmore Kevin Dugan, the undefeated champion of the 167 weight division, had his eyelid split open in the semi-finals, and required four stiches before he could move into the final round. Dugan with the aid of a full facemask, shutout his opponent, Allen from American River College 6-0. Coach Zack Papachristos explained that Dugan wrestled because he wanted to even w with the injury.

"Maddog" Dugan as his teammates call him, said that he has been having problems with cuts this year and last. His only other serious injury was to the knee last season.

The senior member of the Dugan clan, Kevin's father John was on hand. He said that he rarely misses a tournament. As he calmly observed his son being sewed back together, he said that inside he's not calm at all.

"I really scream and yell to be honest," he admitted.

J. Dugan lent some insight into his son's grappling career. He related that Kevin has always been very competitive, and that he has the desire and dedication to do anything he wants. Dugan would like to see his son continue his education and they both feel that wrestling is a way to achieve that.

"I've never tried to push the boys. I've tried to encourage them because competition is good for them. It's a gradual way of breaking into life," the father of four other sons said philosophically.

Dugan became interested in wrestling because of the influence of his older brother Bradley according to their father. "I think if Bradley jumped off a bridge, so would Kevin," he said with a laugh.

The younger Dugan's athletic ability seems to come naturally. His father said that Kevin was always good at football, and in his stint at Dublin High, he was the captain of the team, along with holding the office of class president.

"He hasn't lost too many times. When he does lose, it doesn't hold. He always knows that there's someone better, but he does get angry at himself. I hope he looks at it objectively. He's pretty sensible that way," John Dugan outlined.

The younger Dugan, unaware of all the paternal praise, was concentrating on his upcoming match, the one he insisted on entering and winning.

He talked about the changes he has experienced since his premiere season last year.

"I'm a lot more confident. I realized what's going on, and of course I'm getting more experience. It's not as tough as I thought it was. You tend to build it up in your mind, and get all scared," he said.

But it's doubtful after a showing like last Saturday, that Dugan has any fear left at all.

The stitches which are expected to be out by today, will cause him a few problems.

"I can't put my head in there. Trying to protect it will cause another injury," he explained.

Meanwhile, he's still looking for the scholarship.

49ers give one away

Raiders keep taking the scenic route

Pro football history bears out that the Oakland Raiders generally do things the hard way and this season it's no different.

Fact is, their backs are smack up against the wall, to use the old cliche. Two games left and "must win" situations in both unless other teams competing for the AFC "wild card" spot in the National Football League do a late El Foldo.

That's the way it stood after the Raiders dropped a tough 20-14 decision to the Los Angeles Rams Sunday.

Prior to the heartbreaker in Smogville, coach John Madden refused to concede the AFC West title to Denver. "I felt all along that we were going to win our division," said Madden. "But I guess I was wrong. The best we are looking for now is a wild card spot."

Commenting on the latest clash, Madden said "both sides played with a high degree of intensity. It was very physical and hard fought. We just couldn't stop them when we had to and there were too many mistakes on our part."

Madden added, "we gave them a lot of shots at doing things" referring to five Oakland turnovers — four pass interceptions and a fumble. "Except for the mistakes, I felt we played well."

Stabler agreed with his coach that "too many mistakes beat us," but added "I didn't feel that we played well at all. I'd like to have a couple of those throws back, but it doesn't take a Philadelphia lawyer to figure that out." The Alabama "Snake" said, "my leg wasn't any problem," then added, "they doubled up on our wide receivers, but it wasn't anything we didn't know or expect. What it all boils down to is that anytime you get two good teams playing, turnovers usually decide who wins. They are a sound team and took advantage of our mistakes."

Linebacker Monte Johnson noted, "I felt bad for Les Hayes, who defended against the last touchdown pass. The kid played a whale of game up to that point in an emergency role after Atkinson was hurt. I told him to learn from the experience. He's going to be around a long time and is a fine football player."

Johnson added, "We're not dead by a long shot. If we beat Kansas City and Minnesota, then we're the AFC wild card team, regardless of what happens to the others."

Fullback Pete Banaszak said, "we fought 'em hard and busted our butts out there. It's always a physical game with the Rams, who come right at you. Now we have to re-group, injuries and all to put it together for the playoffs."

Mark van Eeghen, who hit the 1,000 yard rushing mark for the second straight season last week, said "all I can think of now is that we fought 'em very hard and lost. I'm not frustrated, there's no time for that. We've just got to get ready for Minnesota next Sunday."

Big John Matuszak, who played a strong game at defensive end, said "I'm very proud of this team, especially the guys who have been playing hurt week after week. The guys fought their hearts out, but I guess it wasn't enough."

Rick Jennings, who fumbled a punt that led to the first Los Angeles score of the game, explained, "I thought I'd gotten under the ball. But it drifted. I didn't adjust my feet. It was bad judgement on my part. I haven't been pleased by my performance. I'm here to give the team good field position on returns and that one hurts me."

As noted before, the Raiders can cure most of their present ailments by winning the next two to qualify for the playoffs. And as coach Madden put it, "we'd better, or we'll all be home singing Christmas carols instead of playing football."

Speaking of Christmas, the 49ers must have felt the spirit of giving in dropping a 28-27 decision to the MinnesotaVikings in 15 - degree Bloomington weatherSunday.

Afer taking a 24-0 lead midway through thethird quarter, Vike quarterback Tommy Kramer tossed three touchdown passes — including thegame - winner of 69 yards to Sammy White — to take the lead with 1:46 to play.

The win kept the Vikings in front of the Chicago Bears by a game in the race for the NFC Central title. The 49ers, meanwhile, blew any chance of a wild cardhope, as remote as it seemed, by losing. Had they kepttheir lead and won, the seemingly finished 'Niners would have been only a game behind in the race, whichhas Chicago and St. Louis fighting it out with 7-5 records. SF is now 5-7.

Hardiman, Larder lead Warrior win

Paula Hardiman and Jennifer Larder each scored as the Livermore Indian Warriors nipped the Dublin Dynamites 2-1 in Girls' Al Caffodio Under-12 action last weekend.

Holly Hamm and Ruth Nadon each had assists. Lynette Stribling was in goal for the winners and had one save.

The Indian Warriors also defeated the San Ramon Rookies 6-1. Hardiman scored twice to lead the winners. Ruth Nadon, Hamm, Denise Regas and Lynette Stribling each added single goals.

Kathy Atkindo, Caterine Havlier and Jennifer Larder did well all-around. Lisa Parkison had three saves for the Indian Warriors.

Pleasanton United dumped the Livermore Cat Claws 4-1. Traci Hirst, Kim Rose, Michelle Nieto and Taunya Biletnikoff scored for the winners. Scotti Bascom had 10 saves and Biletnikoff three for the victors.

Debbie Gancas scored for the losers. Bridgette Allred had the assist.

In a Under-19 contest Pleasanton Elite shutout the Concord Hurricanes 3-0. Jamie Watson had two goals and Gretchen Heinbaugh one for Elite. The winners finished the season undefeated with 17 victories.

Bernie Pla had nine saves for the winners.

Fairgrounds racing

Kellys take Goosey Gander titles

The Pleasanton husband-wife team of John and Pat Kelly were the only local drivers to win their divisions in the Goosey Gander autocross competition Sunday at the Alameda County Fairgrounds.

John drove a Lotus to win the "D" Prepared division in a time of 45.106 seconds. Later, Pat guided her car, also a Lotus, through the course in 48.443, more than two seconds faster than her closest competition, to win the Ladies' "C" category.

John Kelly was happy with his showing, as it was his first victory in his last four tries. But wife Pat wasn't quite as pleased.

"I'm not real happy with my time," she said. "I was fighting too much oil on the track on my first run, and the setting sun was in my eyes on the second."

Still, she was better off than drivers in later divisions, who ended up fighting darkness. According to Kelly, the 134 drivers who raced in the event — the last of four competitions in the Winter Slush series — were about 50 more than usual.

They stretched the competiton out over eight hours, making it one of the biggest events of the year. Fortunately, all cars in the final two stock categories had working headlights.

The only other local driver to place in any of the 19 categories was W. Lynn Hemus of Dublin, who turned in a time of 52.854 as the only car in the "E" Stock category.

The fastest time of the day was by Dave Blanchard of Santa Clara. Blanchard guided his Titan around the course in 42.742 to easily win the "D" Modified division.

A highlight of the day was the running of a Surtes Formula A road race car by John and Phillip France of San Anselmo. The car has been driven at such events as Laguna-Seca. Meet officials gave the France's an OK to run the car, provided a muffler could be found. Two large coffee cans did the trick.

Baseball's winter pow-wow

Trades still main meeting topic

HONOLULU — The shopping has begun for baseball executives gathered here for their winter meetings. The problem is that many teams still are unwinding from their last marketplace — the re-entry draft.

There was speculation that the trade market would be slow at these meetings because the free agent situation has altered swapping stratagies. Teams hesitate to deal for players who are unsigned and contract status is the No. 1 concern when clubs begin any conversation.

Some players with long-term contracts have no-trade clauses or trade approval clauses that limit their availability. Others have deferred payment agreements that often turn five or six-year pacts into 20-year commitments which other clubs would be hesitant to pick up.

Still, the winter meetings primarily are a place to adjust rosters, patch holes and prepare for the new season. So, the clubs will try to deal. Certainly, many of them were talking over the weekend and there was no shortage of names being tossed around the hotel lobby.

Among the more prominent ones were California Angels outfielder Bobby Bonds, who could be an option playout and free agent in 1978; New York Mets pitcher Jerry Koosman, who was often asked to be traded to his native Minnesota; and San Diego slugger Dave Winfield, whose name is on a number of shopping lists.

Atlanta, rebuilding under new Manager Bobby Cox, and Philadelphia General Manager Paul Owens, equipped with a fistful of extra outfielders like Jay Johnstone, Jerry Martin and Jose Cardenal, have been popular targets for talk.

The meetings officially open on Monday with the minor league draft, a sort of bargain basement for talent with players left off 40-man major league rosters available at $25,000 apiece. Only rarely do clubs do much business at that level but the list of eligibles does include some intriguing ex-major leaguers like Joe Lis, Tom Hall, Jack Heidemann, Ivan Murrell, Chris Arnold, Don Hahn and a host of others.

After that, the minor leagues will convene their meetings, followed at mid-week by the major league sessions.

The meetings will be full of glowing reports over the health of baseball. The sport enjoyed a banner year in 1977, attracting a record total of more than 40 million people at the major league level and 13 million more for minor league games.

Still, there are trouble spots. Oakland, decimated by the first free agent escape a year ago, attracted less than 500,000 and owner Charles O. Finley may be ready to unload his frachise. Cleveland barely drew 900,000 and a shift in ownership could be close there with Gabe Paul, who resigned last week as president of the New York Yankees, rumored heading back to the Indians.

The sale of the Boston Red Sox from the estate of the late Tom Yawkey still is incomplete because of pending court suits but the American League, assured by the group headed by General Manager Haywood Sullivan and ex-trainer Buddy LeRoux that it would not be liable in any future judgment, has scheduled a Thursday discussion of the purchase.

On the National League agenda is the status of President Chub Feeney, who was granted a one-year extension of his contract at these meetings a year ago. That year now is up and Feeney's fate is up to the owners once more.

Grizzlies take Riverbank cage

OAKDALE — California High School's basketball team served notice it could be a factor in the upcoming East Bay Athletic League race by winning the Riverbank Lions Club Invitational Tournament with a 55-43 win over Denair here Saturday night.

Forward Chuck Cary, who tallied 14 points, led a balanced Grizzly attack with 14 points. Brian Green added nine markers and Daryl Lamb eight for the Grizzlies.

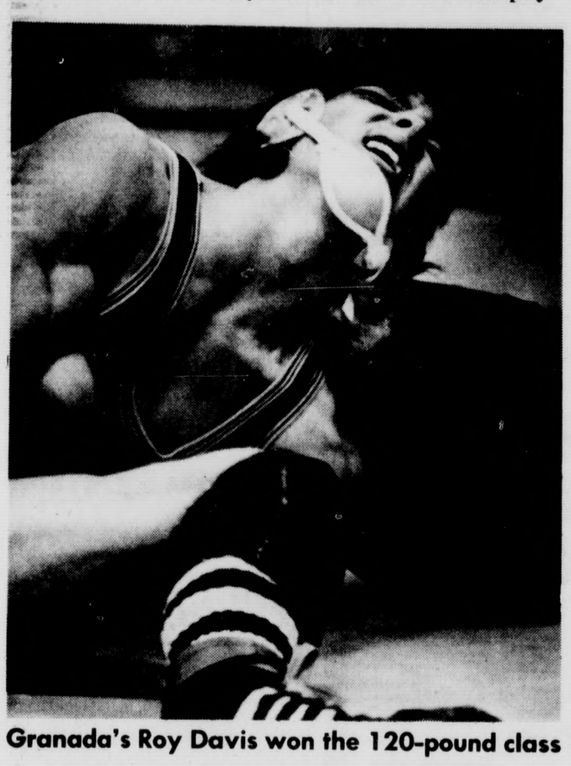
The score was tied 12-12 at the first-quarter break but Cal took a slight 24-22 margin at halftime and blew the game open in the third period, outscoring the Coyotes 15-9.

The Grizzlies scored nine straight points in the third period and gradually increased their lead. Sandy LaBeaux tallied four of those points.

California got its best offense together in the final quarter, scoring 16 points to 12 for the losers.

Brent Myers led Denair with 19 points on nine field goals and one free throw.

It was California's first-ever invitational tournament championship.



Granada's Roy Davis won the 120-pound class

Satre too much for Dons

CONCORD — It was a case of too much Sandi Satre as the Amador Valley High School girls' basketball team fell to Clayton Valley, 73-72 in the finals of the third Annual Concord Classic here Saturday night.

Satre fired in a 12-foot jump shot with two seconds remaining in overtime to give the Eagles the victory over Amador Valley.

The Dons apparently had the game sewed up in overtime as they jumped off to a 71-65 advantage in the period. But then Satre swished the nets for seven points to ruin Amador Valley's hopes.

CV picked up a 12-6 first-quarter advantage and Satre and Carey Sheehan each tallied six points in the second period as the Eagles rolled to a 30-16 advantage.

But the Dons refused to quit. Grace Autio and Cheryl Withoft led the Amador effort in the first half and Carolyn Hill pumped in seven points in the third period. Jamie Watson added six in that quarter as the Dons closed the margin to 49-44.

Amador Valley used a fast break to start the fourth quarter and gradually closed the gap. Amador finally took the lead with 5.46 left but Satre brought the Eagles back to a 63-57 lead. However, Withoft sparked a Don comeback that tied the score with one second left in regulation time.

Matadors take own tourney

It was only fitting that Granada High School's wrestling team won its own Granada Invitational Tournament Saturday night.

Six Matador matmen captured individual first places as Granada won its second crown in as many seasons. The Matadors rolled up 191 points to 151 for runner-up Marina (151) and third place Encinal, 139, in the 16-team tournament.

Leading the way for Granada was 165-pounder Bill Freeman. Freeman won his first two matches by pins, took his semi-final match by a decision and throttled Don Brager of Mt. Eden 5-1 in the championship match. The match was tied after two periods but Freeman took the Mt. Eden matman down and also got a nearfall for the victory.

Other Matador winners were Rick Quiorez (95); Roy Davis, (120); Tom Sherman (127); Robbie Compton (133) and Monte Young, (145).

Young took a decisive 11-3 decision over Livermore's Mike Draper.

In another championship match Shannon Grisham of Dublin, the MVP for the lightweight divisions, took a 6-3 victory over Marina's Jeff Reyna in the 112-pouns division. Another East Bay Athletic League wrestler, Dave Arrighi of San Ramon, defeated Britt Ferguson of Acalanes, 12-6 in the 138-pound class.

Freeman was selected as the Most Valuable Wrestler for the heavyweight divisions.

Dublin finished seventh with 90 points. The Gaels also picked up a second place by Sean Kennedy in the 175-pound competition. Encinal's Torrin Lagorio pinned Kennedy 30 seconds into the second round.

Granada, 191; Marina, 151; Encinal, 139; Tracy, 110; Mt. Eden, 101; Acalanes, 99; Dublin, 90; Kennedy, 84½; Liberty, 75⅝; Newark, 68; San Ramon, 59; Foothill, 55; San Lorenzo, 28; California, 23.
